Crecer — Revenue evidence

Build with Gemini XPRIZE · hackathon period 19 May – 17 August 2026 · USD · prepared 16 August 2026

Total revenue earned from third-party customers during the period: $0.00

REVENUE BY MONTH

May 2026	$0.00
June 2026	$0.00
July 2026	$0.00
August 2026 (through Aug 17)	$0.00
Total	$0.00
Related-party revenue	$0.00

WHY THERE IS NOTHING TO EXPORT

Payment processing is Stripe, running in live mode. The Stripe account has processed zero payments, so a dashboard export or bank statement for this period is an empty document. This statement is provided in its place.

Billing is built and functioning rather than theoretical. A live checkout session opens on demand at the published price of $39.00 per month, and the application refuses to open that session unless the price Stripe would charge matches the price the app promises the customer — so a mismatch cannot reach anyone. What has never happened is a completed payment.

We could have run the founder’s own card through checkout and reported a figure. We did not. A founder paying himself is not a customer, and a number that needs an asterisk is worth less than a zero that does not.

ACCOUNTS IN PRODUCTION

Paying subscriptions (real charge in Stripe)	0
Arms-length customers acquired	0
Courtesy accounts, never charged, excluded from revenue judges’ evaluation account and two founder test businesses	3
Orders received by client businesses through Crecer	0 ($0.00)

HOW A JUDGE CAN VERIFY THIS INDEPENDENTLY

The live product is at <https://encuentraloahora.com/crecer/> with the evaluation account supplied in the project description. Inside, the operations area reports revenue, active subscriptions and courtesy accounts straight from the production database, and separates cold customers from related-party accounts. The figures above are that report, not a reconstruction.

Notes

- Revenue is $0. Stripe runs in live mode at $39/month and a live checkout session opens, but no payment was ever completed. No founder payment was run through the system to manufacture traction.
- SG&A is research and development. The $334.50 is Claude Max, the AI tooling used to write the software, billed at $111.50/month including Puerto Rico sales tax on May 23, June 23 and July 23. The August 23 charge falls after the deadline and is excluded. The official template has no R&D line, so it sits under SG&A.
- COGS is the cost of running the service in production — Google Cloud Gemini API $25.15, OpenAI image-generation API credits $45.10, Twilio $0.59, Shotstack video rendering $39.00. Roughly $37/month to operate.
- Marketing and customer acquisition spend: $0.00.
- Pre-hackathon resource, disclosed: Hostinger Business Web Hosting, $59.88 paid April 25, 2026 for an annual plan running to June 2027. Paid before the period opened, so under cash basis it is excluded above. Prorated, roughly $13 is attributable to the window.
- Some receipts are billed to Manuel Rivers, a pseudonym of the entrant — same person, same email and address as the other receipts.

How to audit this. Each row names the provider’s own invoice or receipt number, so any line can be matched against the original document on request. The Anthropic receipts are billed to Manuel Rivers, a pseudonym of the entrant, Jesús Manuel Pérez Rivera — same email and same address as the OpenAI, Shotstack and Hostinger receipts. Anthropic’s next charge fell on August 23, after the submission deadline, and is deliberately excluded.

Google Cloud — Billing report

What this shows. The Google Cloud billing account for Crecer was opened in June 2026 for this hackathon, so the entire spend on the account falls inside the competition window. The only service consumed is the Gemini API, totalling $25.15. Exported from Google Cloud Console → Billing → Reports for the full period rather than month by month.

Corresponding production volume: 3,886 recorded Gemini calls out of 9,132 total model calls across 31 distinct agents, with 3,236,247 input tokens and 831,680 output tokens. The complete call-by-call log is attached separately.
